

Echo

Welcome to the new Echo!

This is an exciting year for the Echo. As you can see, we are using a new format—a quarterly magazine—to capture the 1995-96 school year at Spring Arbor college. We hope this will renew your interest in the unique benefits that the Echo can offer.

In this first issue, we are integrating the viewbook into the Echo. And while you're searching for a date, check out four of our regular departments:

*Class Notes: Each issue will focus on a particular class. In this first magazine we examine freshmen and highlight their first month at the Arbor.

*The Bubble and Beyond: The center spread of each issue will feature a timeline of events from the previous month (or months). The timeline includes headlines from around the Arbor and around the nation as well.

*Around the Oak: This department centers on important SAC events. Issue 1 concentrates on Arbor Games 1995.

*The Laundry Room: On the last page of every issue, you'll discover some fun facts about the SAC community. Here, find out which TV shows students can't live without...and which ones they'd erase from the programming schedule.

We hope you like this first issue of your installment yearbook. Look it over, and let us know what you think. But for now, enjoy!

New Orientation Activities Benefit New Students

This year's New Student Orientation aimed to better meet the goals the college had for the new students. Kim Hayworth, who helped design the orientation program, said, "We felt the purpose of orientation was to introduce students to college life. Last year was more fun and games. This year we wanted more of a balance between fun and games and creating a solid academic environment." To meet the college's goals for new students, Student Development focused on the best way to introduce students to campus and encourage them to build relationships.

Operation Adaptation concentrated on group building activities. This year there was no wall to struggle over, and no one blindly crossed a river. Instead, activities such as the trust fall and the Nitro crossing built relationships within core groups. For the trust fall, students climbed a ladder and fell back into the hands of people they had just met the day before. In the Nitro crossing, the object was for each core member to swing across a rope to three hula hoops with one person carrying a full bucket of water. "At Operation Adaptation," said Jami Pitcher, "the games you played made you talk together, and you walked away as friends rather than strangers."

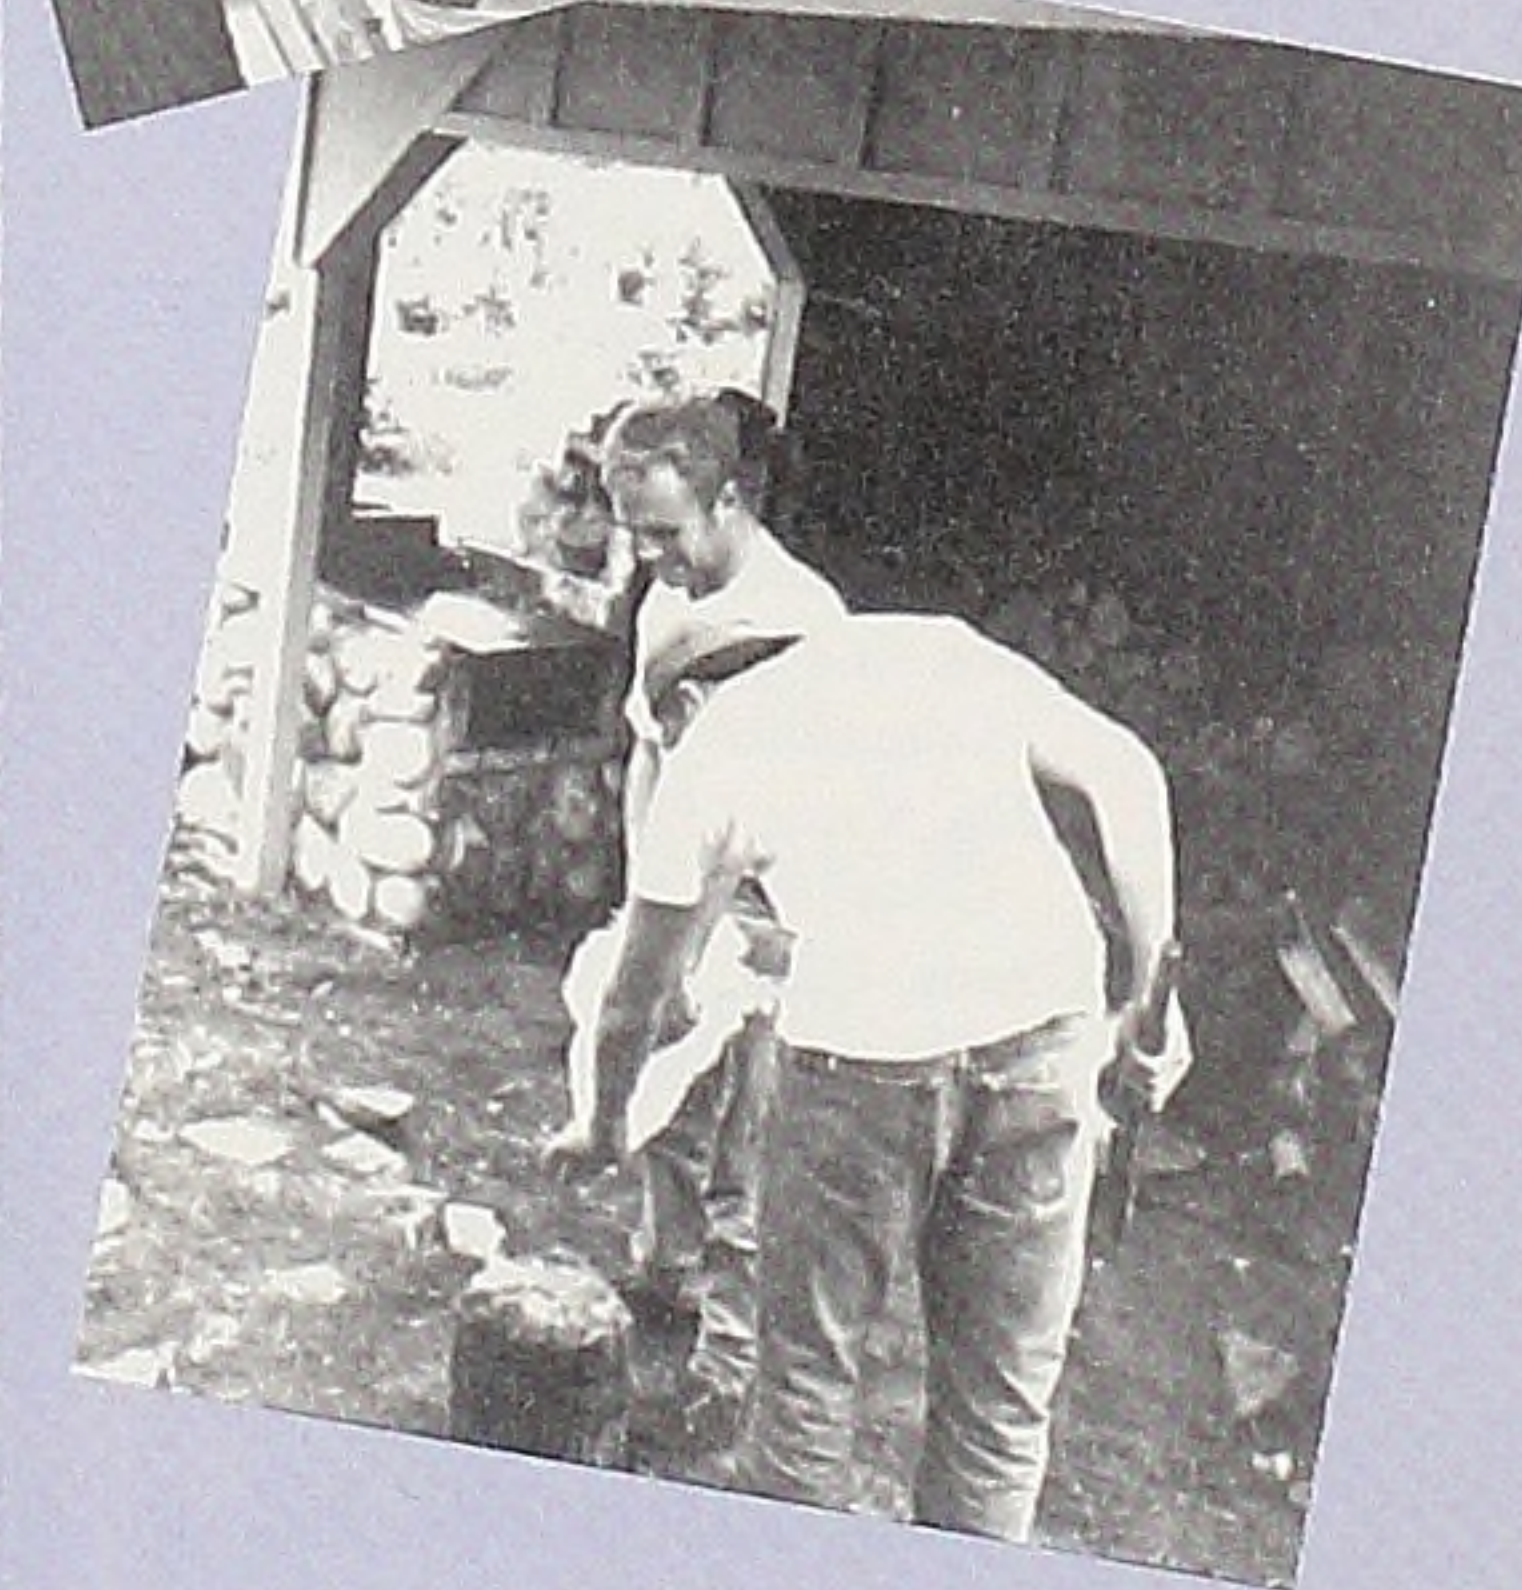

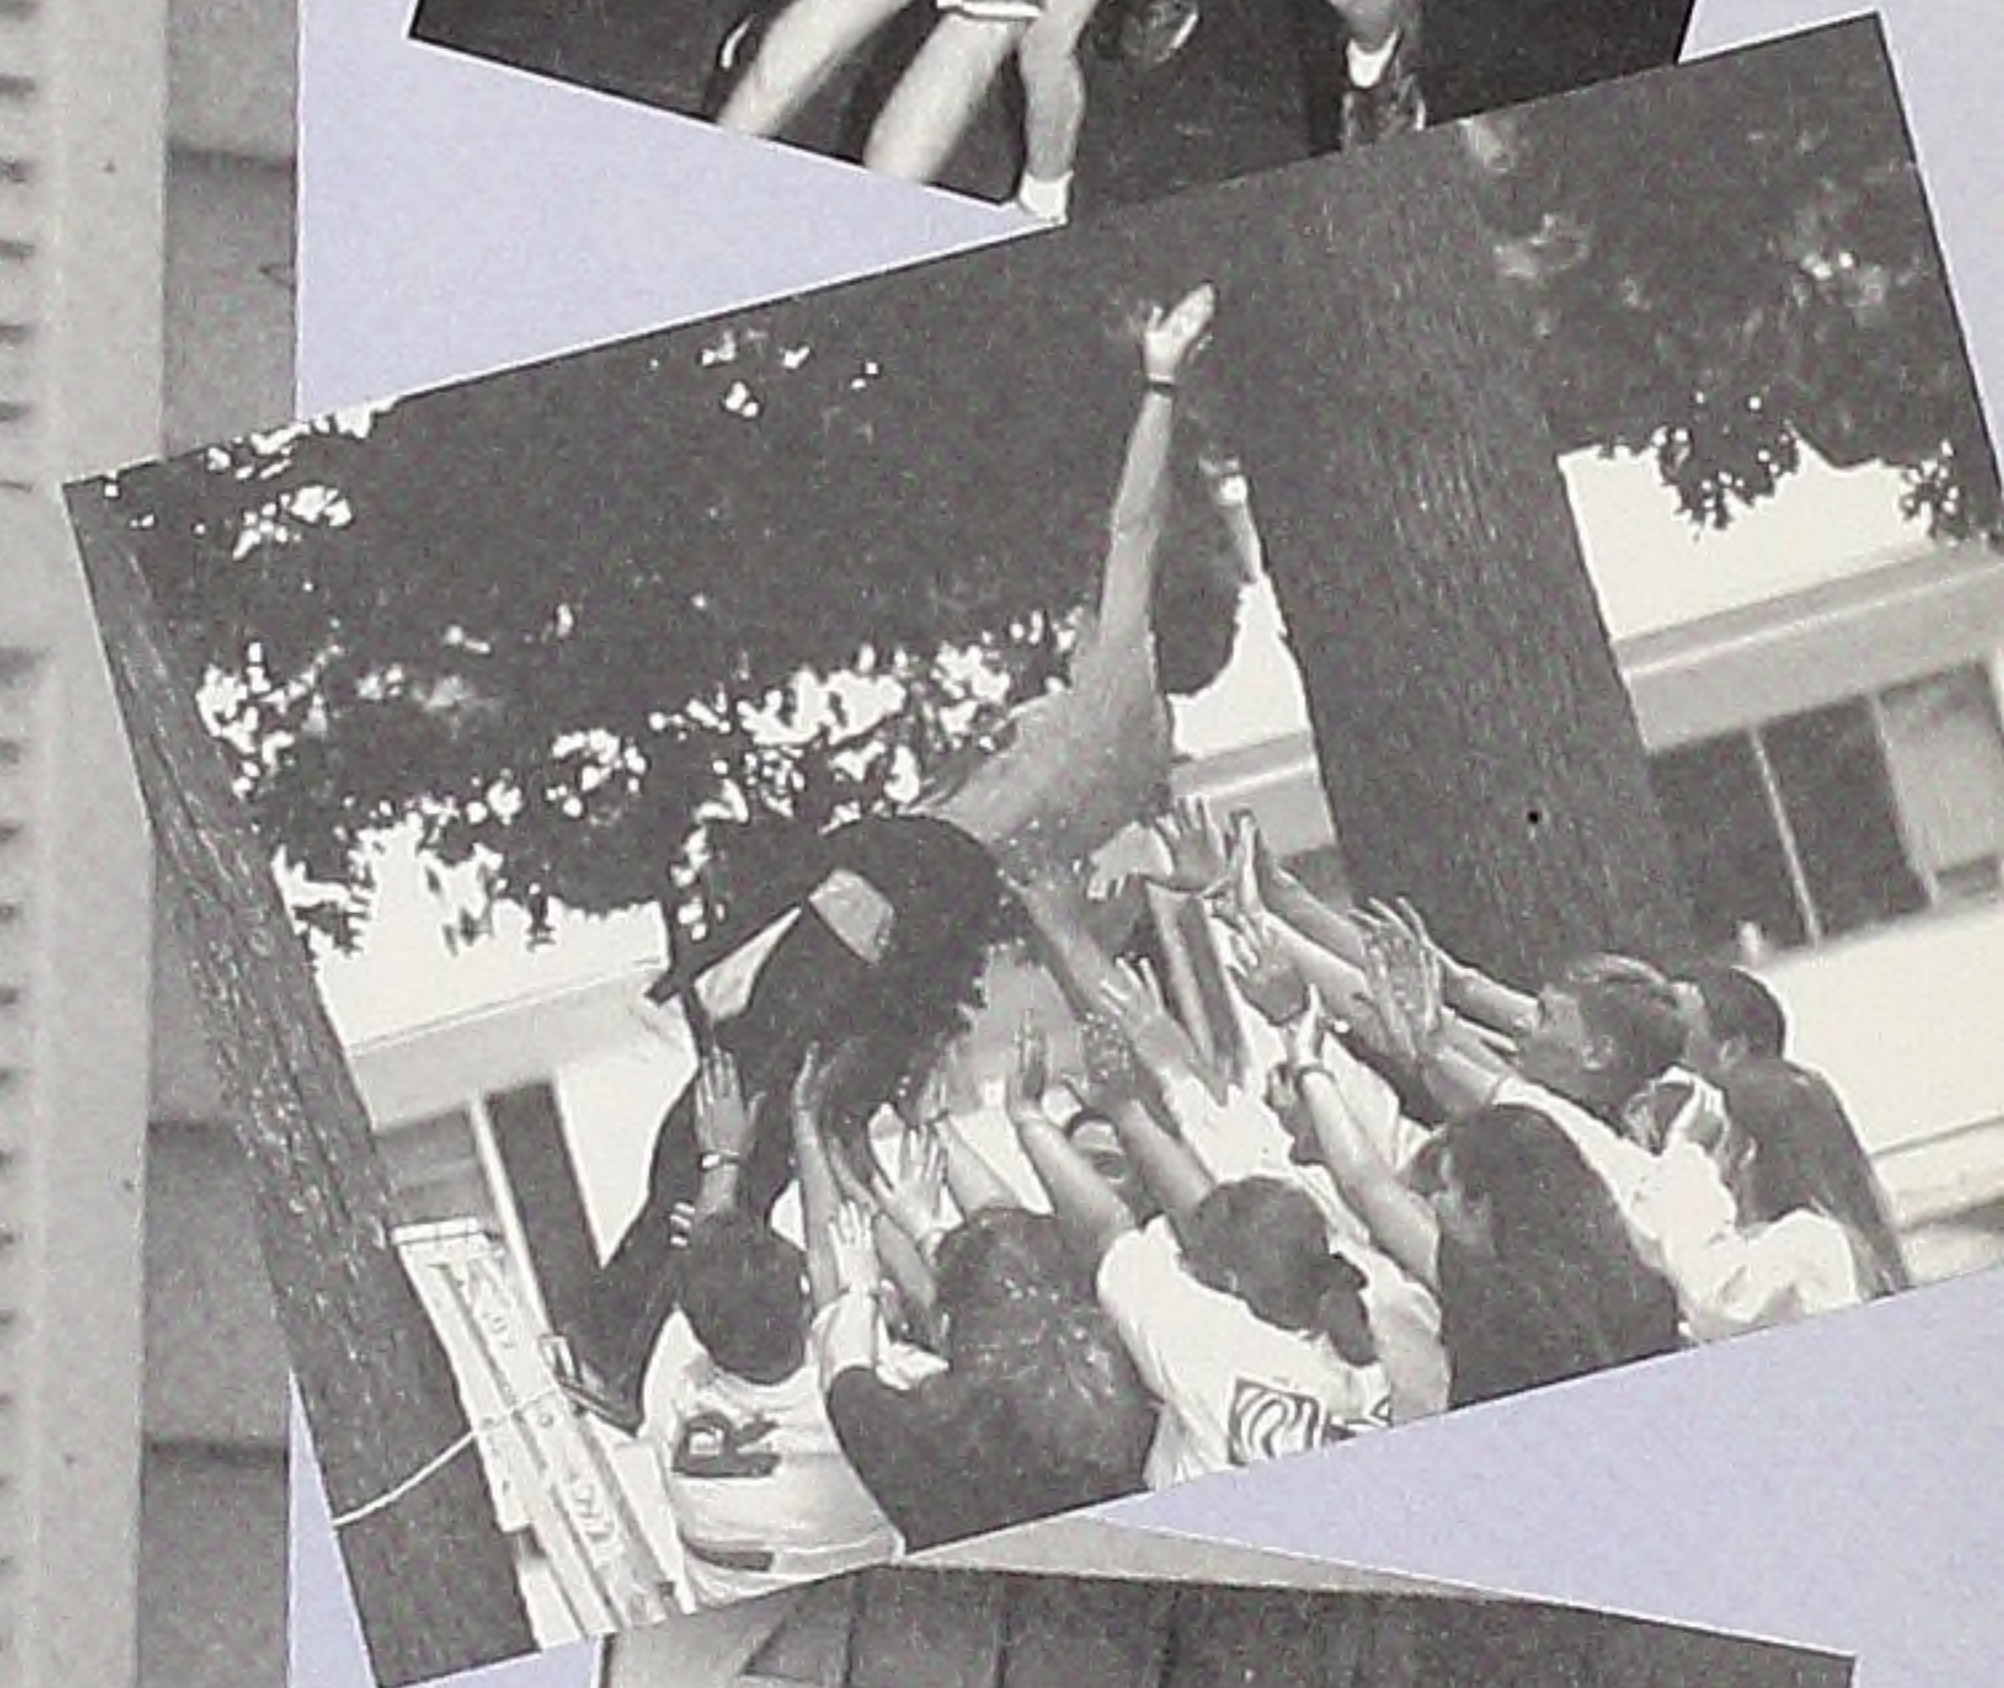

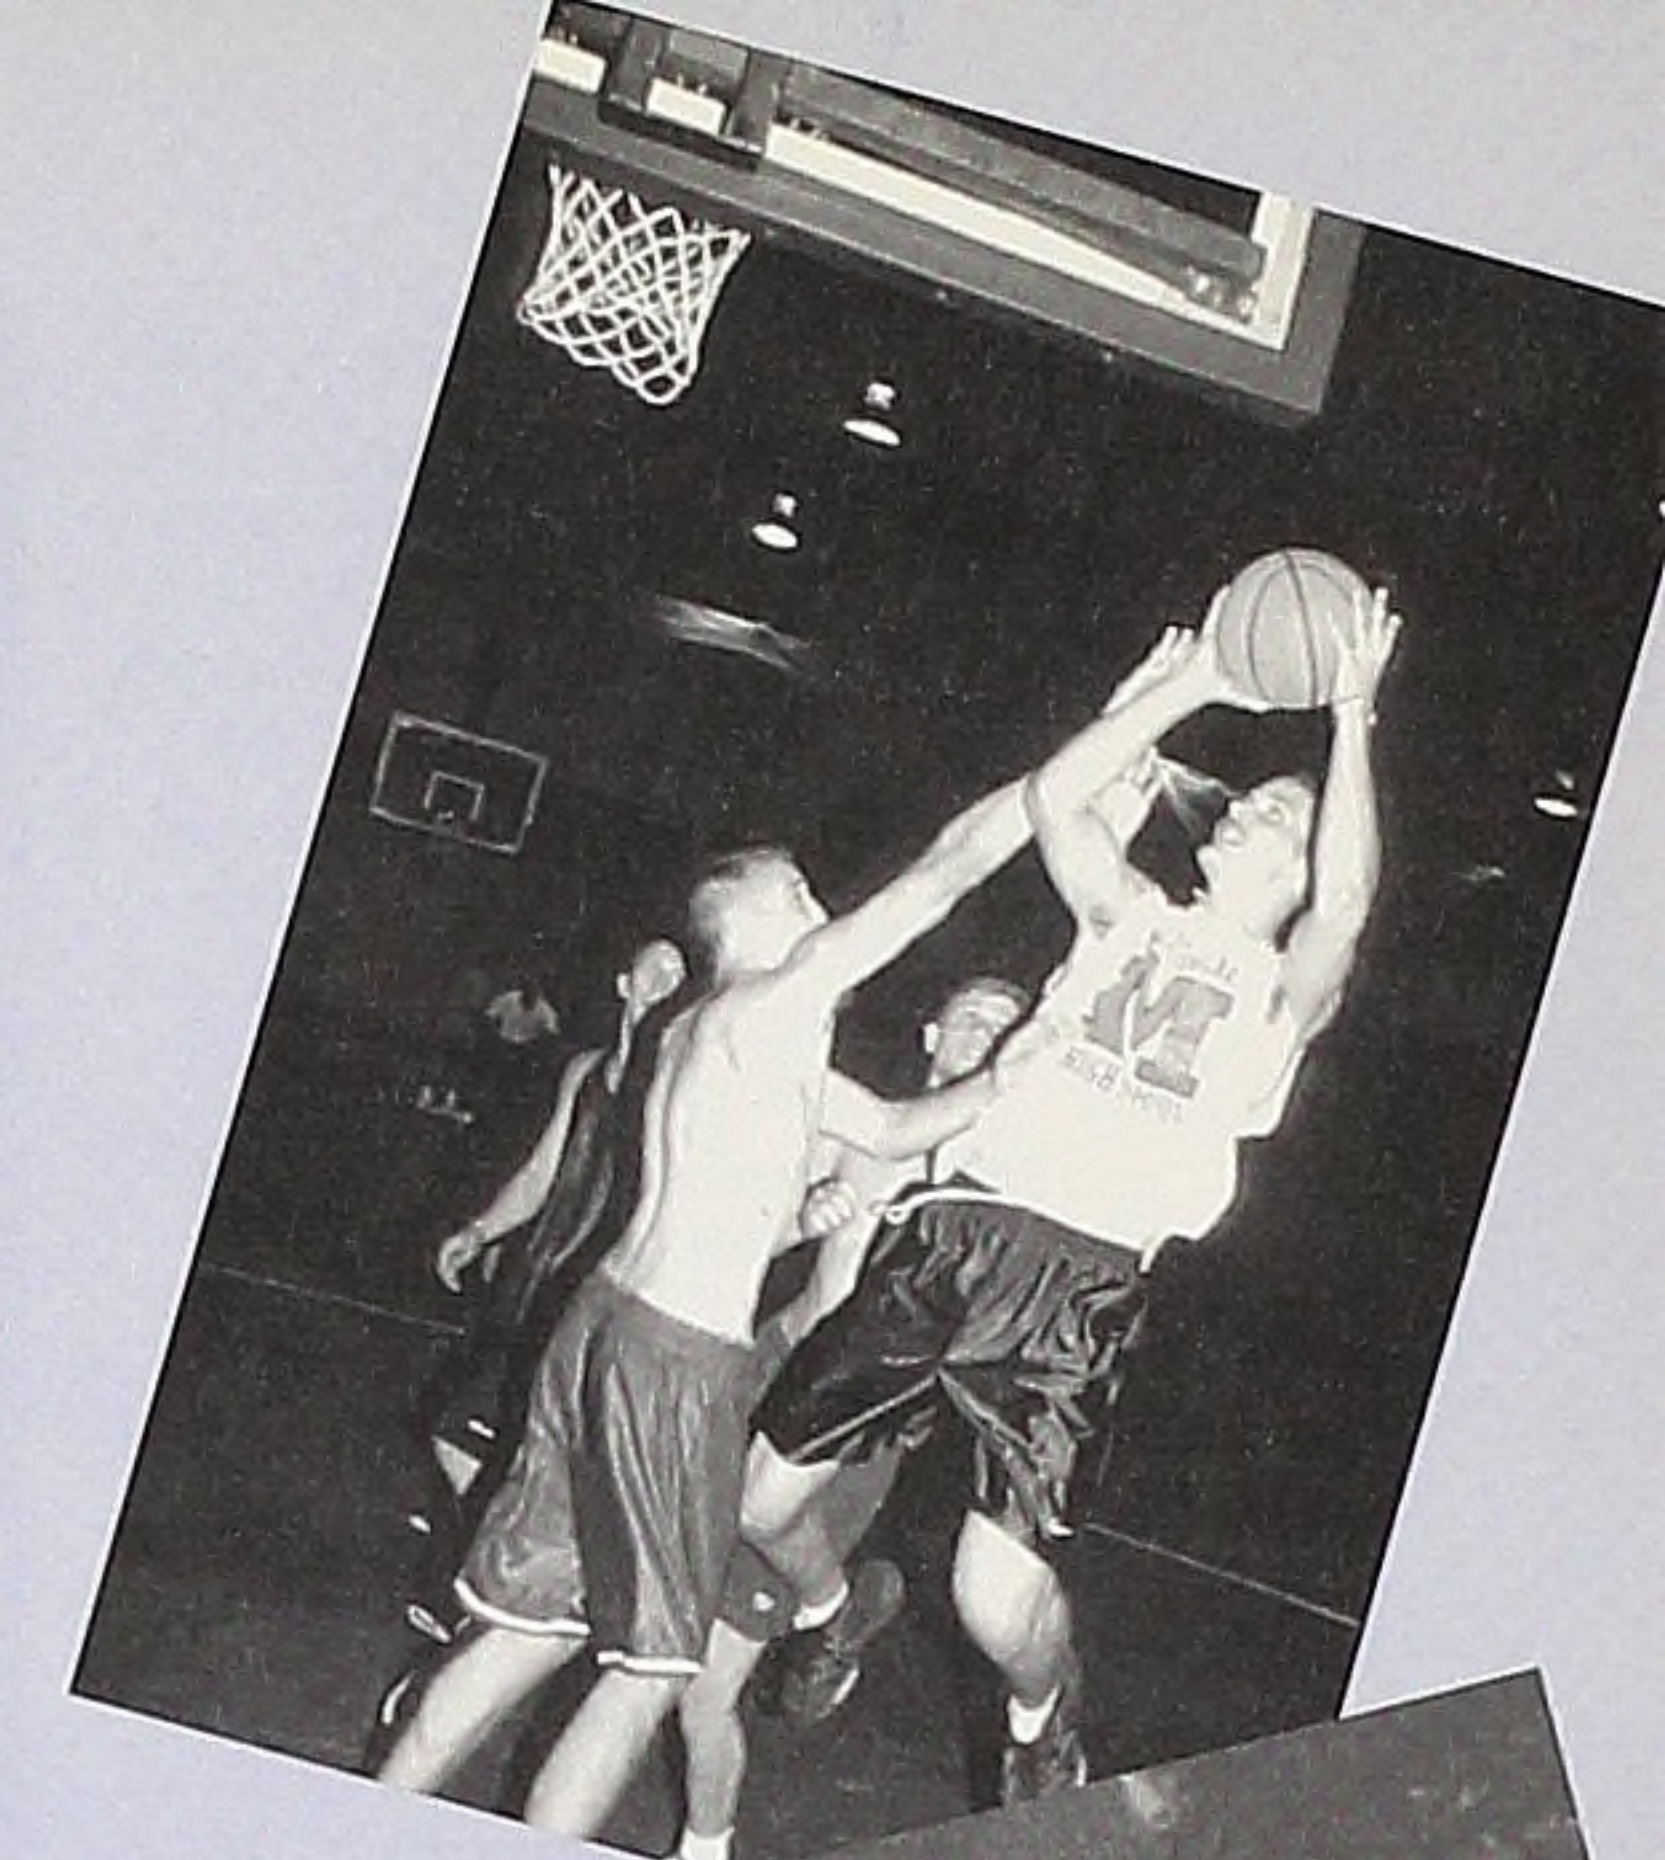

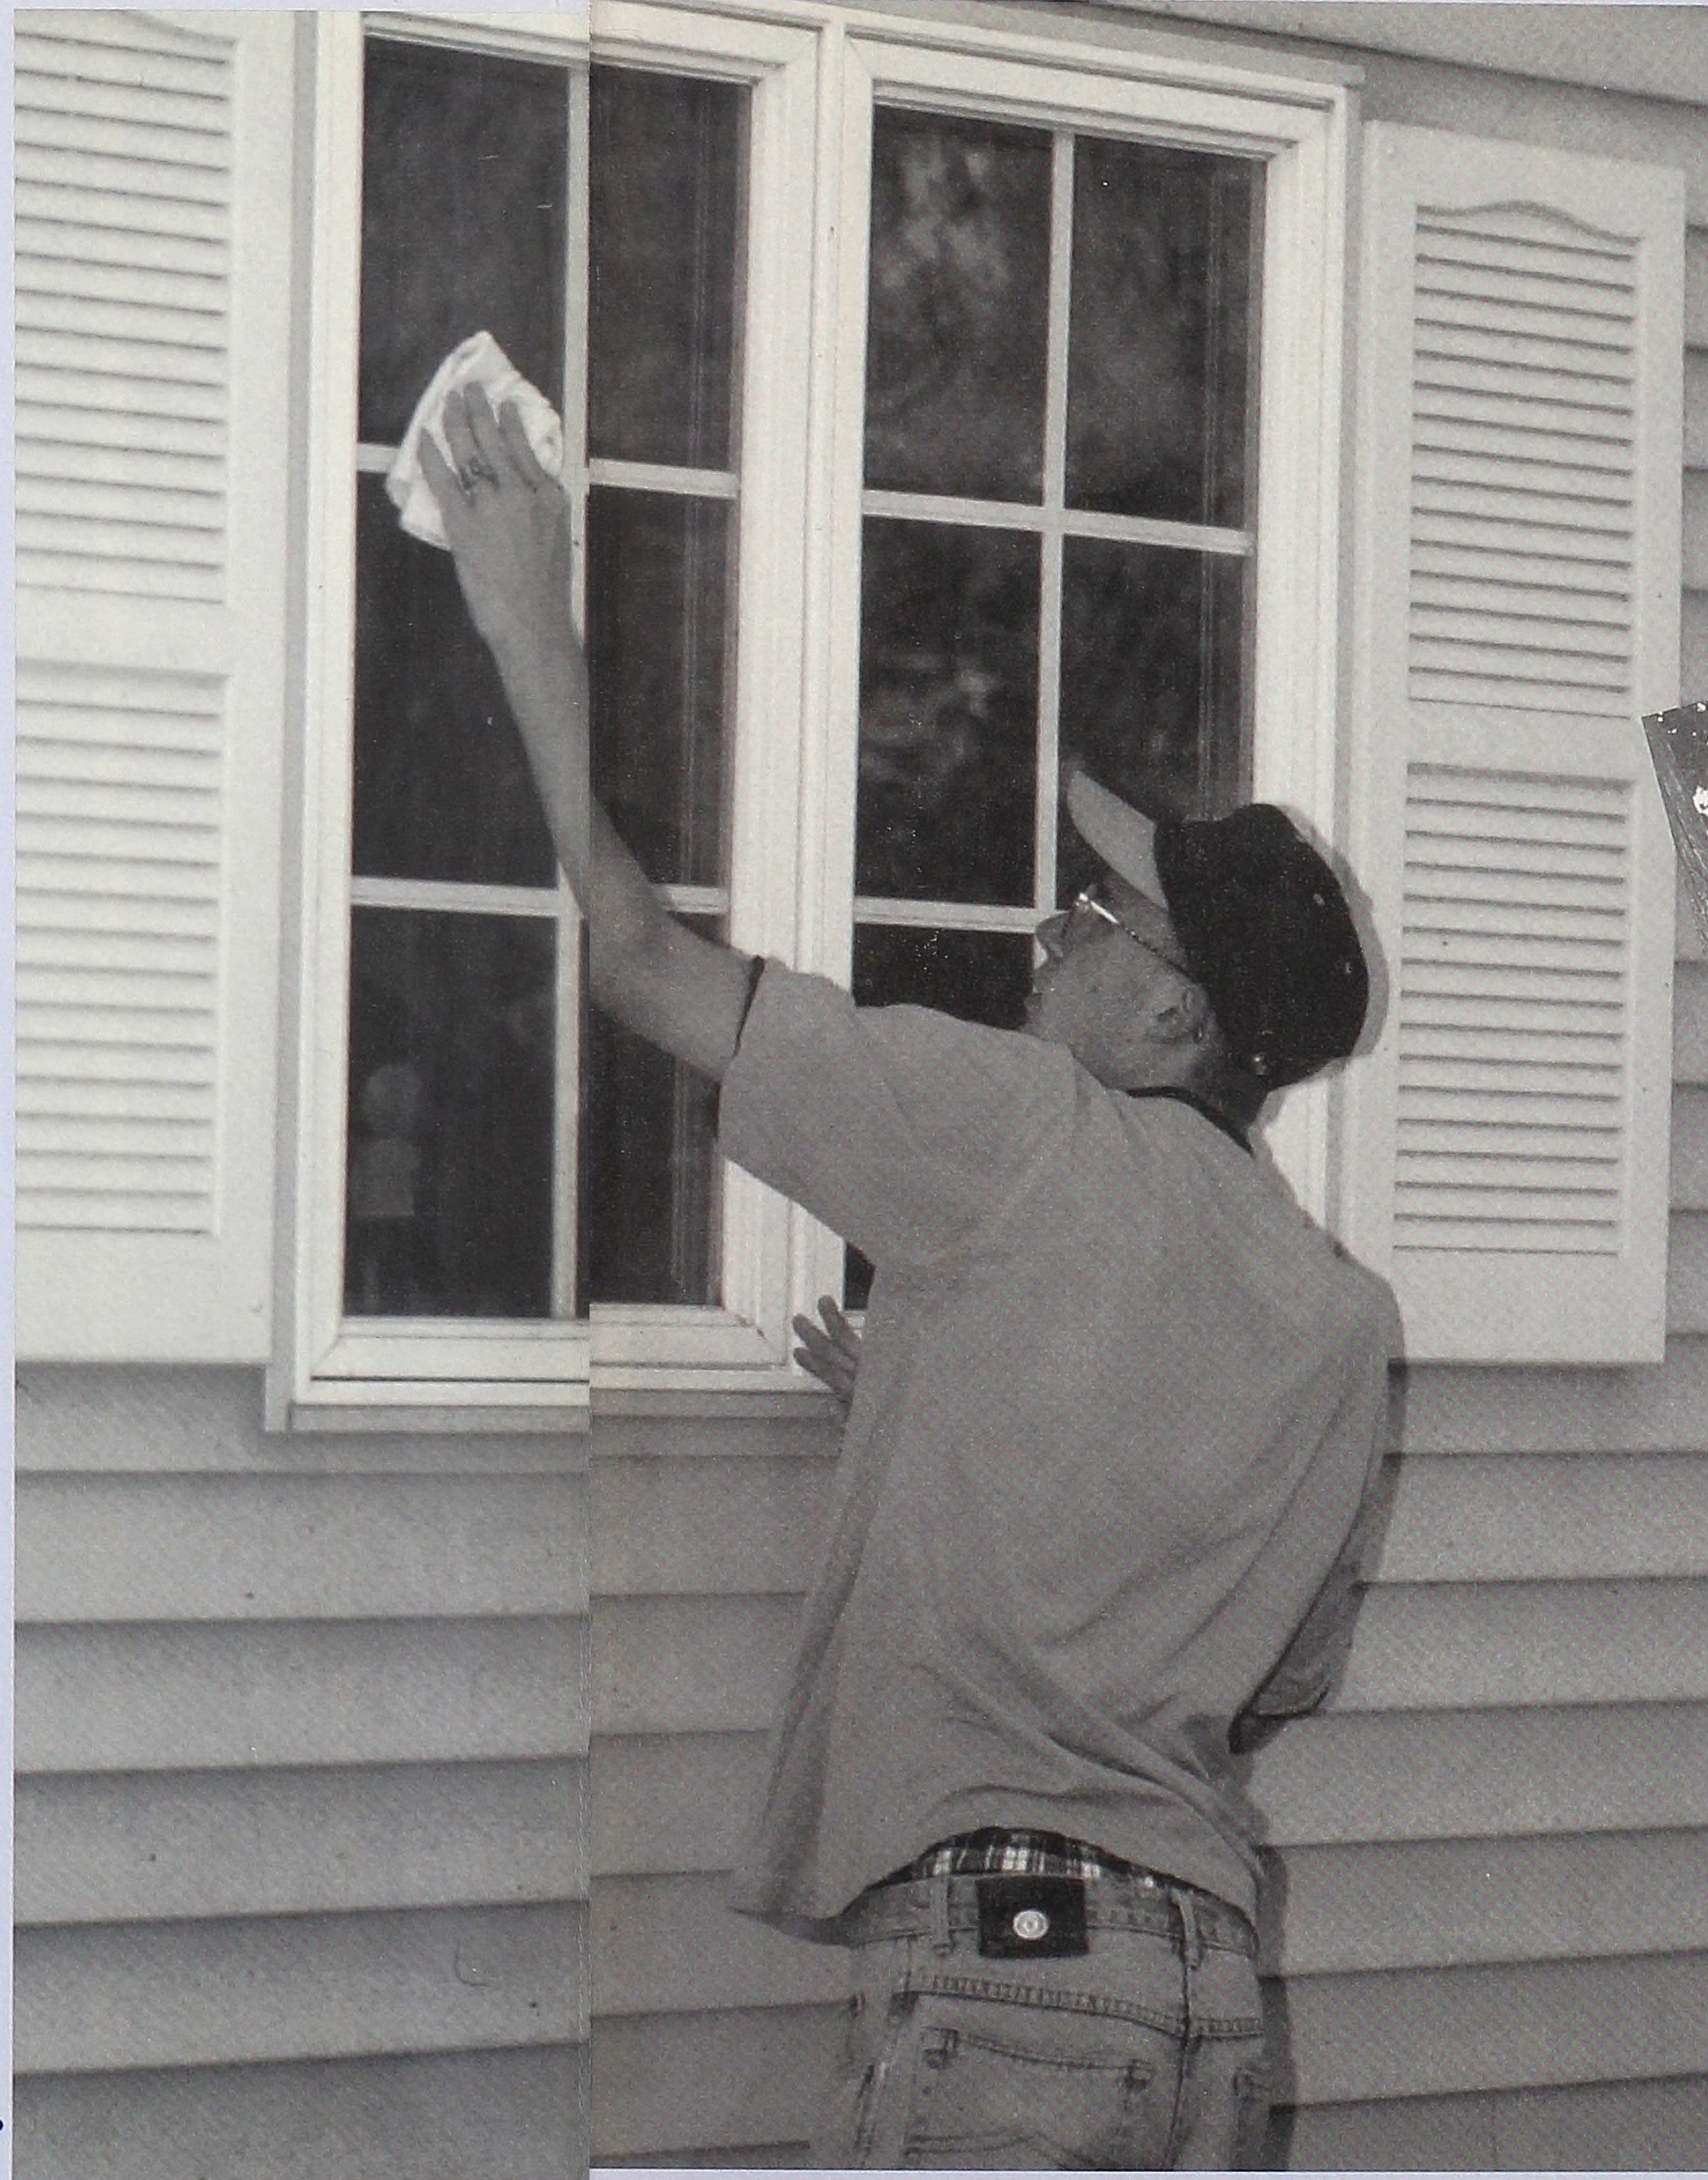

A service project was also added to the schedule, and each core group had a different activity to accomplish. Some worked on the exterior appearance of the campus by painting the bumpers outside of the Student Center or by painting the baseball dugouts. Others helped beautify the community by picking up trash on Teft Road or at Lime Lake. Washing windows at a senior citizen home was the job of another core group. Michelle Timmons was one of many freshmen who enjoyed the project, stating, "I thought it was the best part because the little things that we can do to help either our world or others are the things that really make you feel good about yourself."

One of the main goals was to encourage the freshmen to start thinking at a college level early on in their Spring Arbor College experience. "We wanted to add a component to help students to understand more clearly the purpose of college," said Roger Varland, Core 100 coordinator. Over the summer, the freshmen students received the book, The Best Things in Life, by Peter Kreeft, which challenged them to think about their beliefs and to form their own ideas.

Orientation was an extremely beneficial time for freshmen, and gave them a chance to adjust to college life. Chris Barnes agreed, stating, "When I came to Spring Arbor I wasn't in the frame of mind to get back into school again, so [orientation] helped."

The Bubble and Beyond

September

Calvin's crash

America's best known designer drops his controversial "kiddie porn" ad campaign under pressure. "It was completely misunderstood," Klein said as sales of the jeans soared.

Candy corn

Gen-X thought the Dutch candy Mentos was cool following a series of dorky commercials. "The Freshmaker" ad makers also produced a compilation CD of corny songs: Mentos, the Rocktrax.

Sorry, Sandi

Sandi Patti's CD was pulled off the shelves of Christian music stores nationwide after her announcement that she had had an extra-marital affair with One's Don Pelis. Patti has now married Pelis.

Spring Arbor University?

The college reorganized itself over the summer. Divisions were replaced by schools and academic dean Mark Sargent got a new title: provost. He will oversee student development and recruiting as well as academic programs. His goals include "a greater sense of community and a greater sense of mission."

Parking Problems

While the number of available parking spaces went down, the ticketing rates appeared to go up. SAC continued to maintain there wasn't a parking problem, however. "There shouldn't be any problems finding a place to park," said Rusty Schulz, director of campus security.

ACLU Action

The ACLU lodged a complaint against the state of Michigan for allowing SAC to hire only Christian professors in its prison program. "Once [religious exclusive agencies] seek a contract to perform public services they can't discriminate on the basis of race or religion," said Howard Simon, executive director of the ACLU in Michigan.

China Connection

Carla Koontz, assistant dean for international education, discussed her semester in China at the Sichuan College of Education during the Community of Learners lecture series. As part of an exchange program, visiting professor Feng Gang joined our faculty for a semester teaching Chinese language and culture.

Out of Africa

Dr. Mike Boivin's book, The Accidental Anthropologist, was published in late September. Based on a series of letters he wrote as a Fulbright scholar studying the cognitive development of village children in Zaire, the book will be used as a text in CORE 200.

Back for More: 700 full-time students registered for classes on campus, the same number as last year. The number of first time students was down slightly and the number of returning students was up, both by 14. An additional 188 part-time students are taking classes.

Wonder Bra

Freshmen initiation took a new twist as 15 Delta girls ran around Lowell wearing only bras above their waists. Although the event was similar to Beta's "welcomings," there were many complaints about the activity.

Tradition!

The faculty finally showed up for chapel, all wearing funny outfits. Convocation featured students, faculty and staff addressing aspects of the Concept. Garnet Hauger told students to prove something to themselves. "Commitment is internal," she said.

The Streak

Orioles Cal Ripkin, 35, set a record for most consecutive games: 2131. The streak began in May, 1982.

Wake Up!

SAC saw its brief relationship with the caffeine pill Vivarin end when an ad for the product in the Crusader came under fire. Carlene Ledyard, director of student health services, says "Vivarin is a drug, a stimulant to which you can develop a true addiction to." The college had earlier passed out free samples of the pill without any complaints.

15 Gotta dance!

Residence Life staff sponsored line-dancing on the front lawn. Does anyone remember when it was called "western-style aerobics" because of the college's prohibition of social dancing?

16 Powell Mania

Amid speculation of a possible presidential run, retired General Colin Powell began a five-week frenzied tour of the nation to launch his book, My American Journey.

Bike Hike

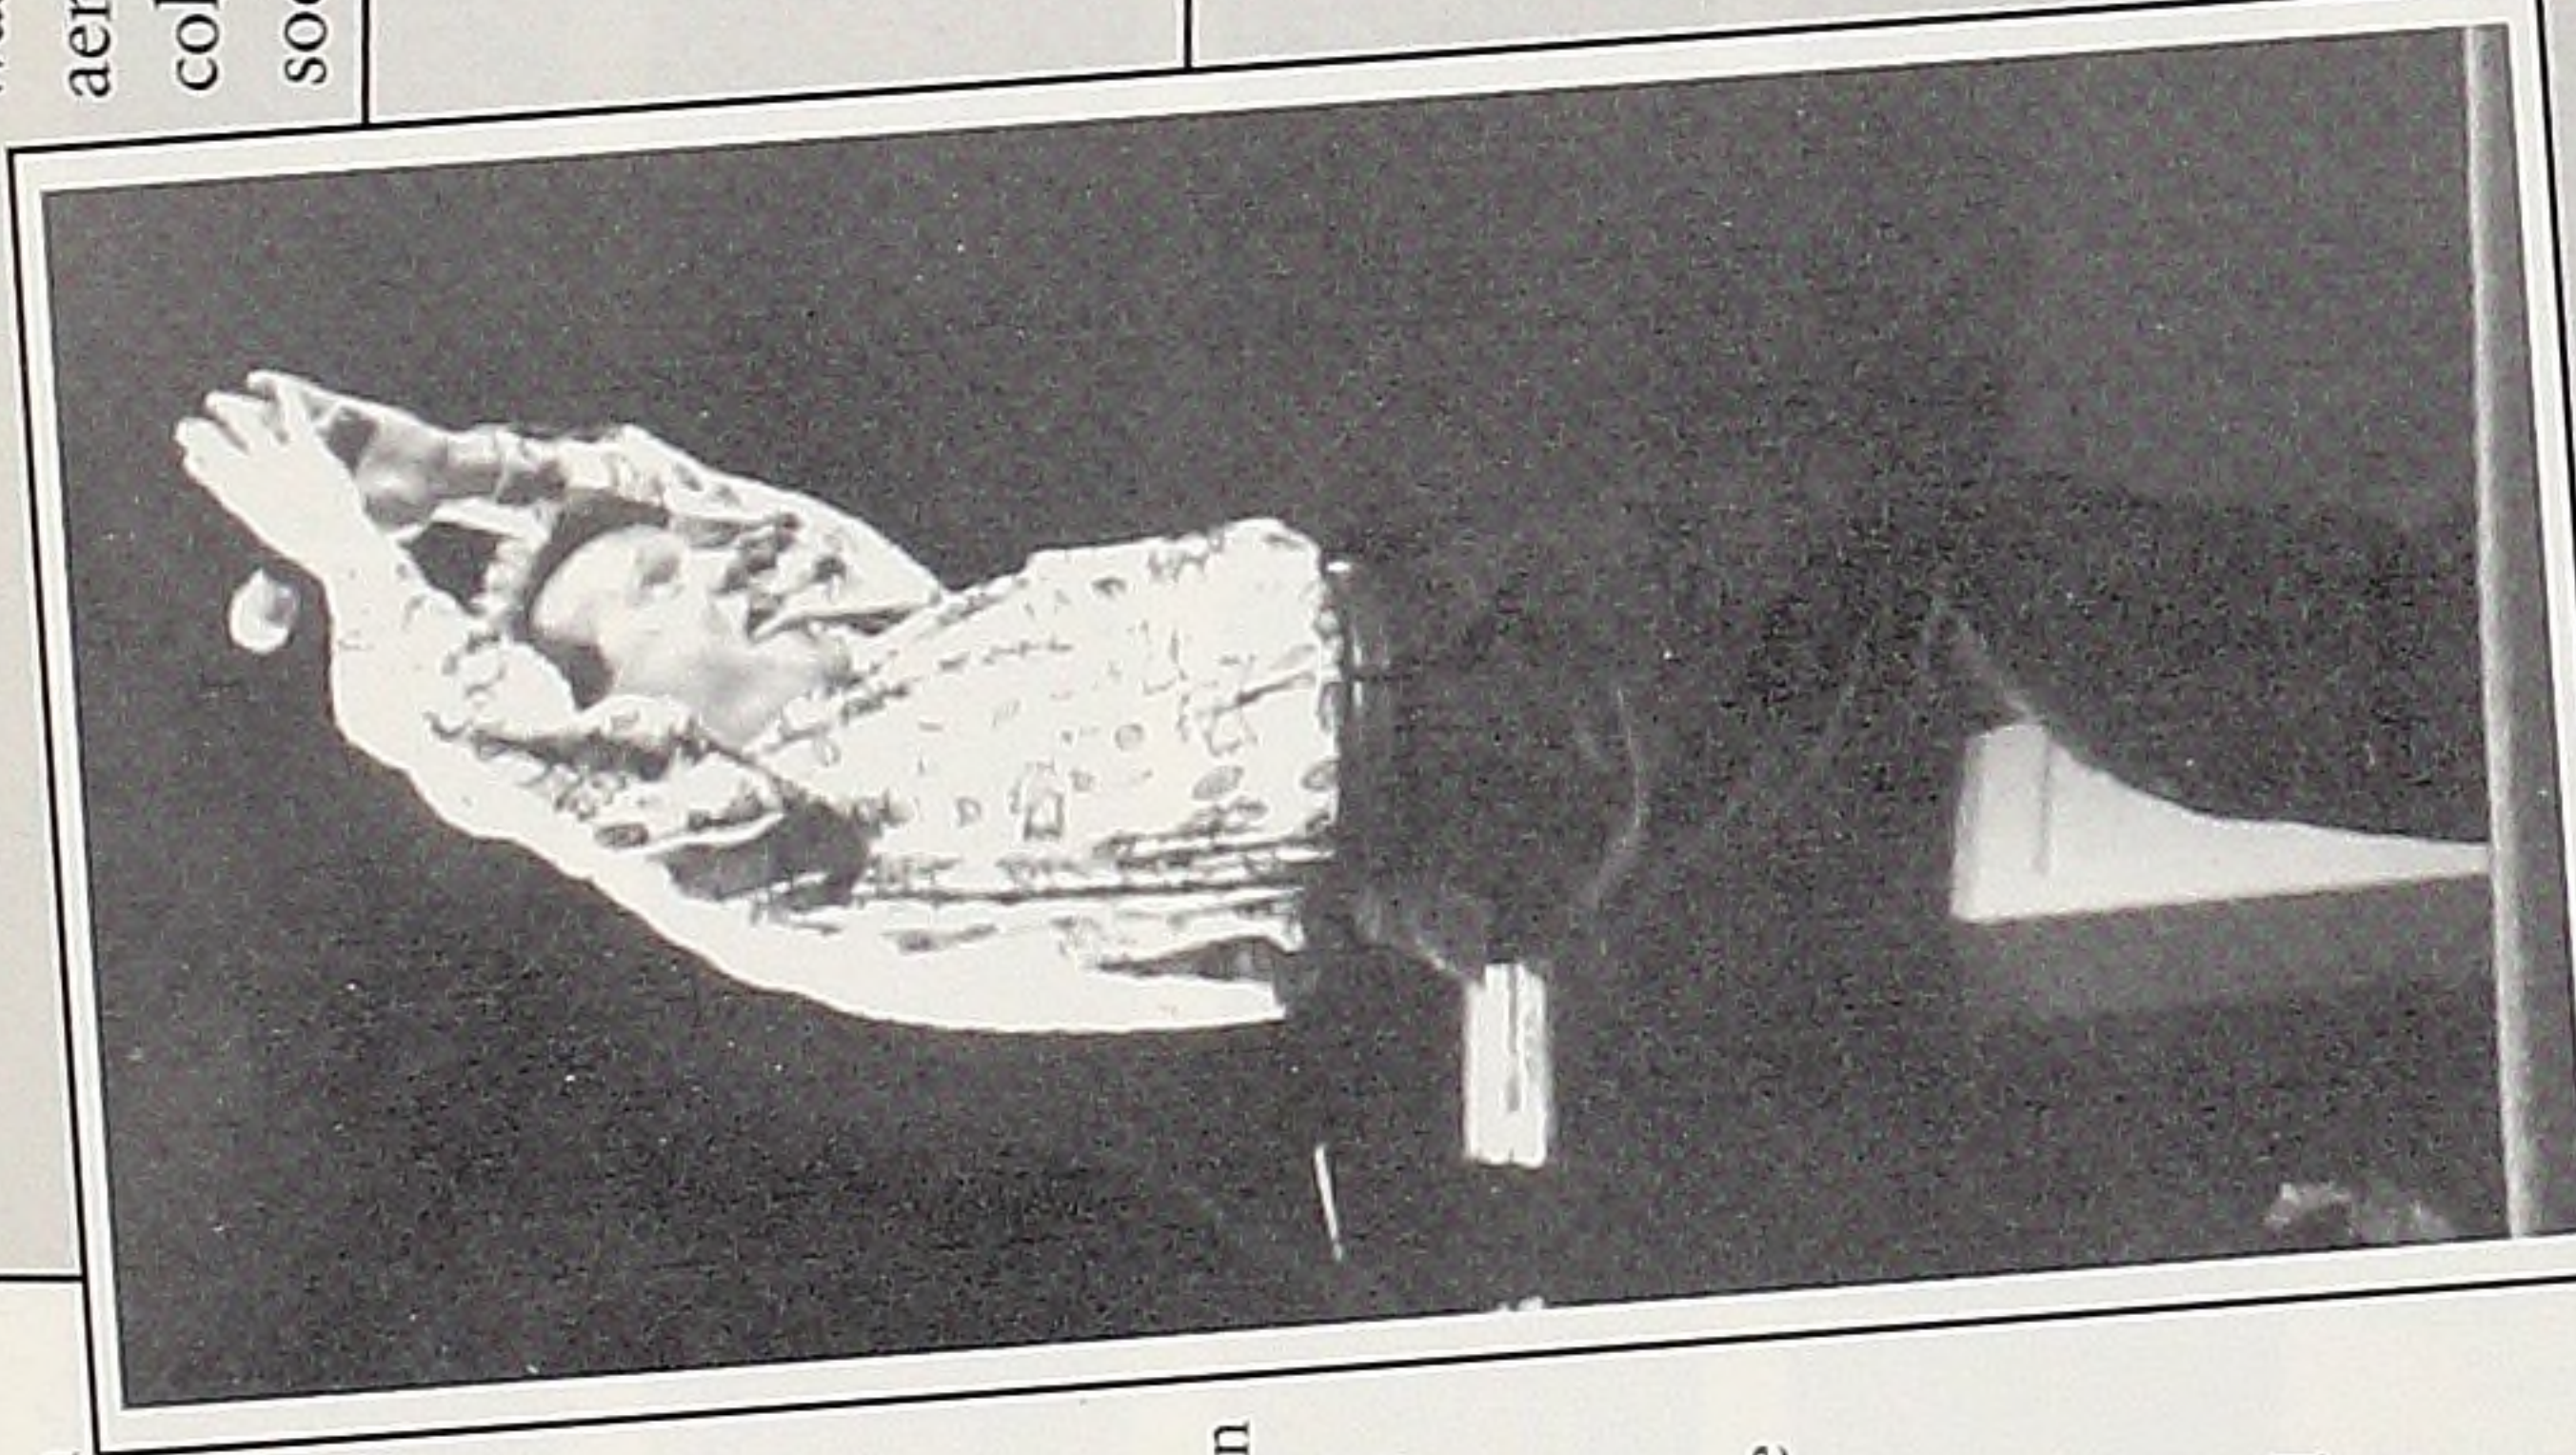

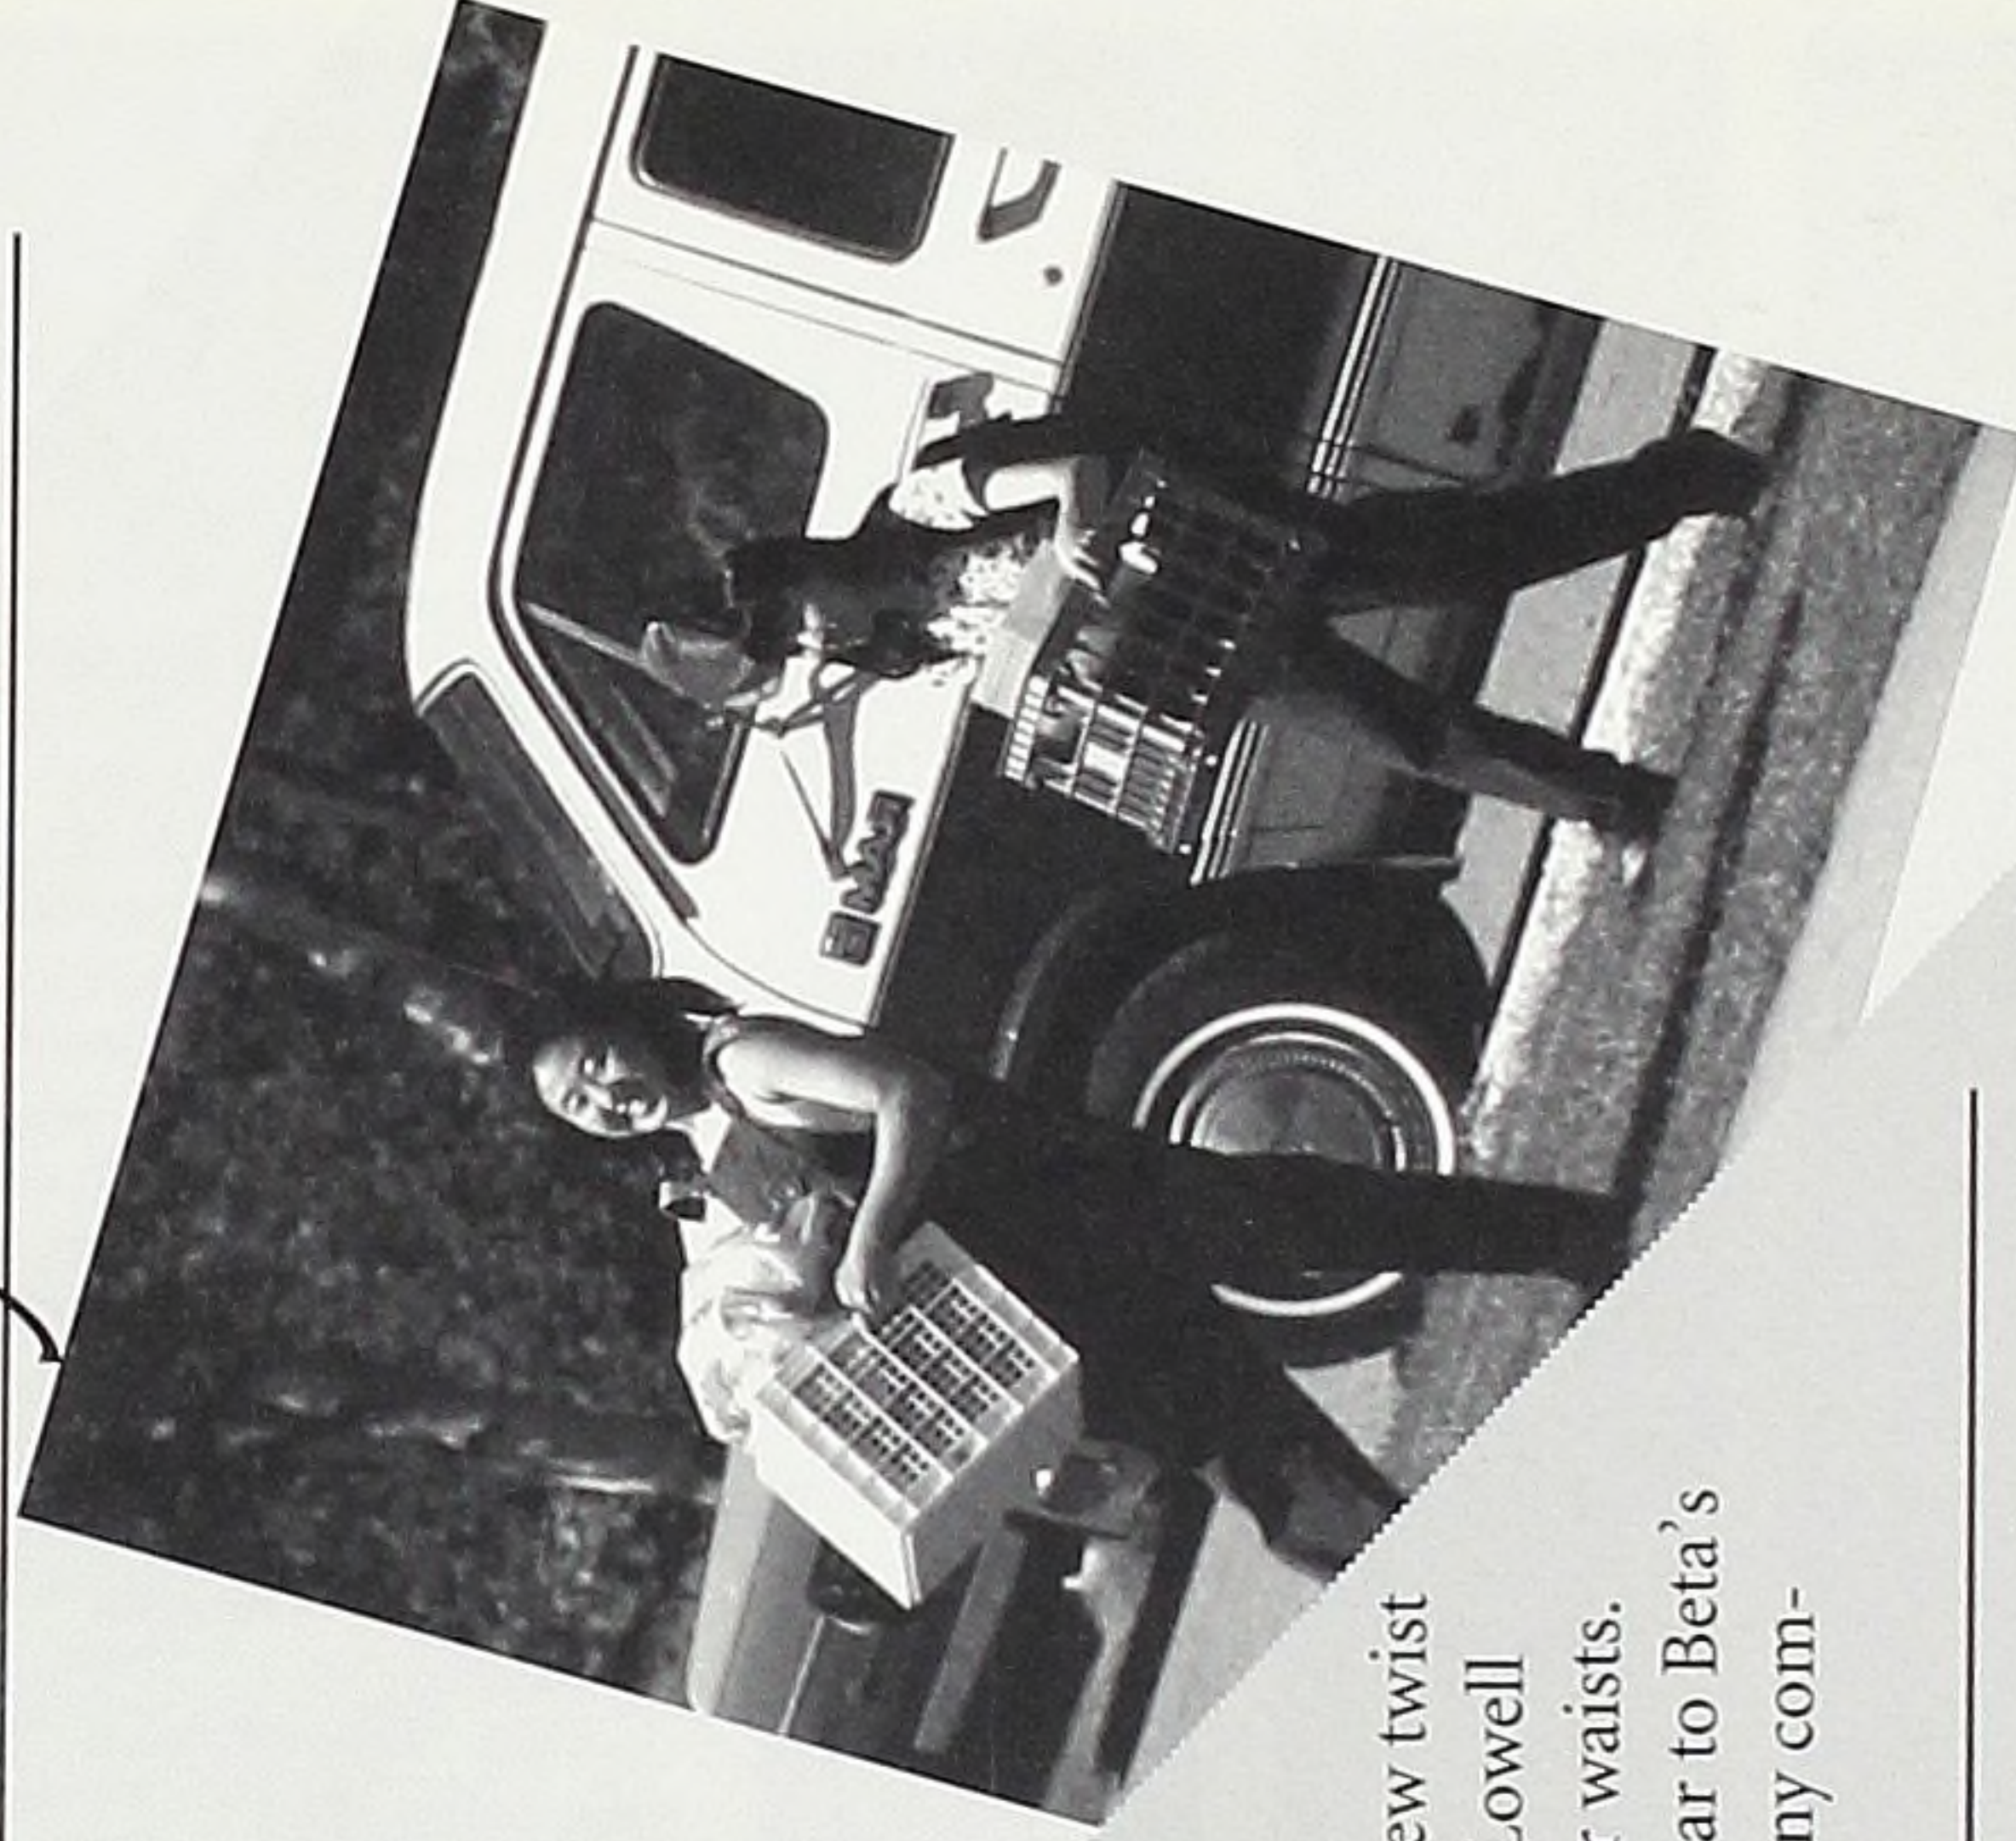

SAC Extreme went to Ft. Custer State Park to ride mountain bikes. This was the club's first activity. "It was cold and wet, but we had fun," said Rob Selfe, sophomore.

Family values

Former Vice President Dan Quayle speaks in Spring Arbor, urging a national conversation on family values. "[I] have this feeling that society is turning into a value-free zone," said Quayle. He encouraged students to get involved.

The Million Dollar Man

Good news accompanied the annual Fellows Banquet as college officials made the announcement of a $900,000 donation by Frank Disarto. The gift will be used to eliminate SAC's debt on the fieldhouse, with the remainder going towards the library project.

Mark Lowry brought his Mouth in Motion tour to Spring Arbor on the 21st.

Arbor Games

The Olympic spirit comes to SAC

The students of Spring Arbor College once again embraced the tradition of Arbor Games during the fall of the 1995 school year.

Even without the heat, the intensity of the September sun warmed participating students. "The weather was warm, but there must have been some nasty cross winds because I missed on the egg toss," said David Prestin, Ormston II resident.

The events themselves were kicked off by the lighting of the lamp at the center of the fountain between Ormston and Muffitt. The brother/sister floor teams then proceeded to the soccer field en-masse to compete.

The activities of the afternoon began as the teams performed skits that introduced the countries that they invented. The skits were judged on creativity, originality and humorous content. Two skits that took a prominent place in the memories of those present were the Saturday Night Live parody by the Sprockets and the DeltaBetacos skit.

The skits were followed by the usual mayfair of relays. The traditional events like the Egg Toss, Pop Chug, and Tug O' War kept everyone busy and messy, and the Sack Race and the Wheelbarrow Relay were the year's variable events.

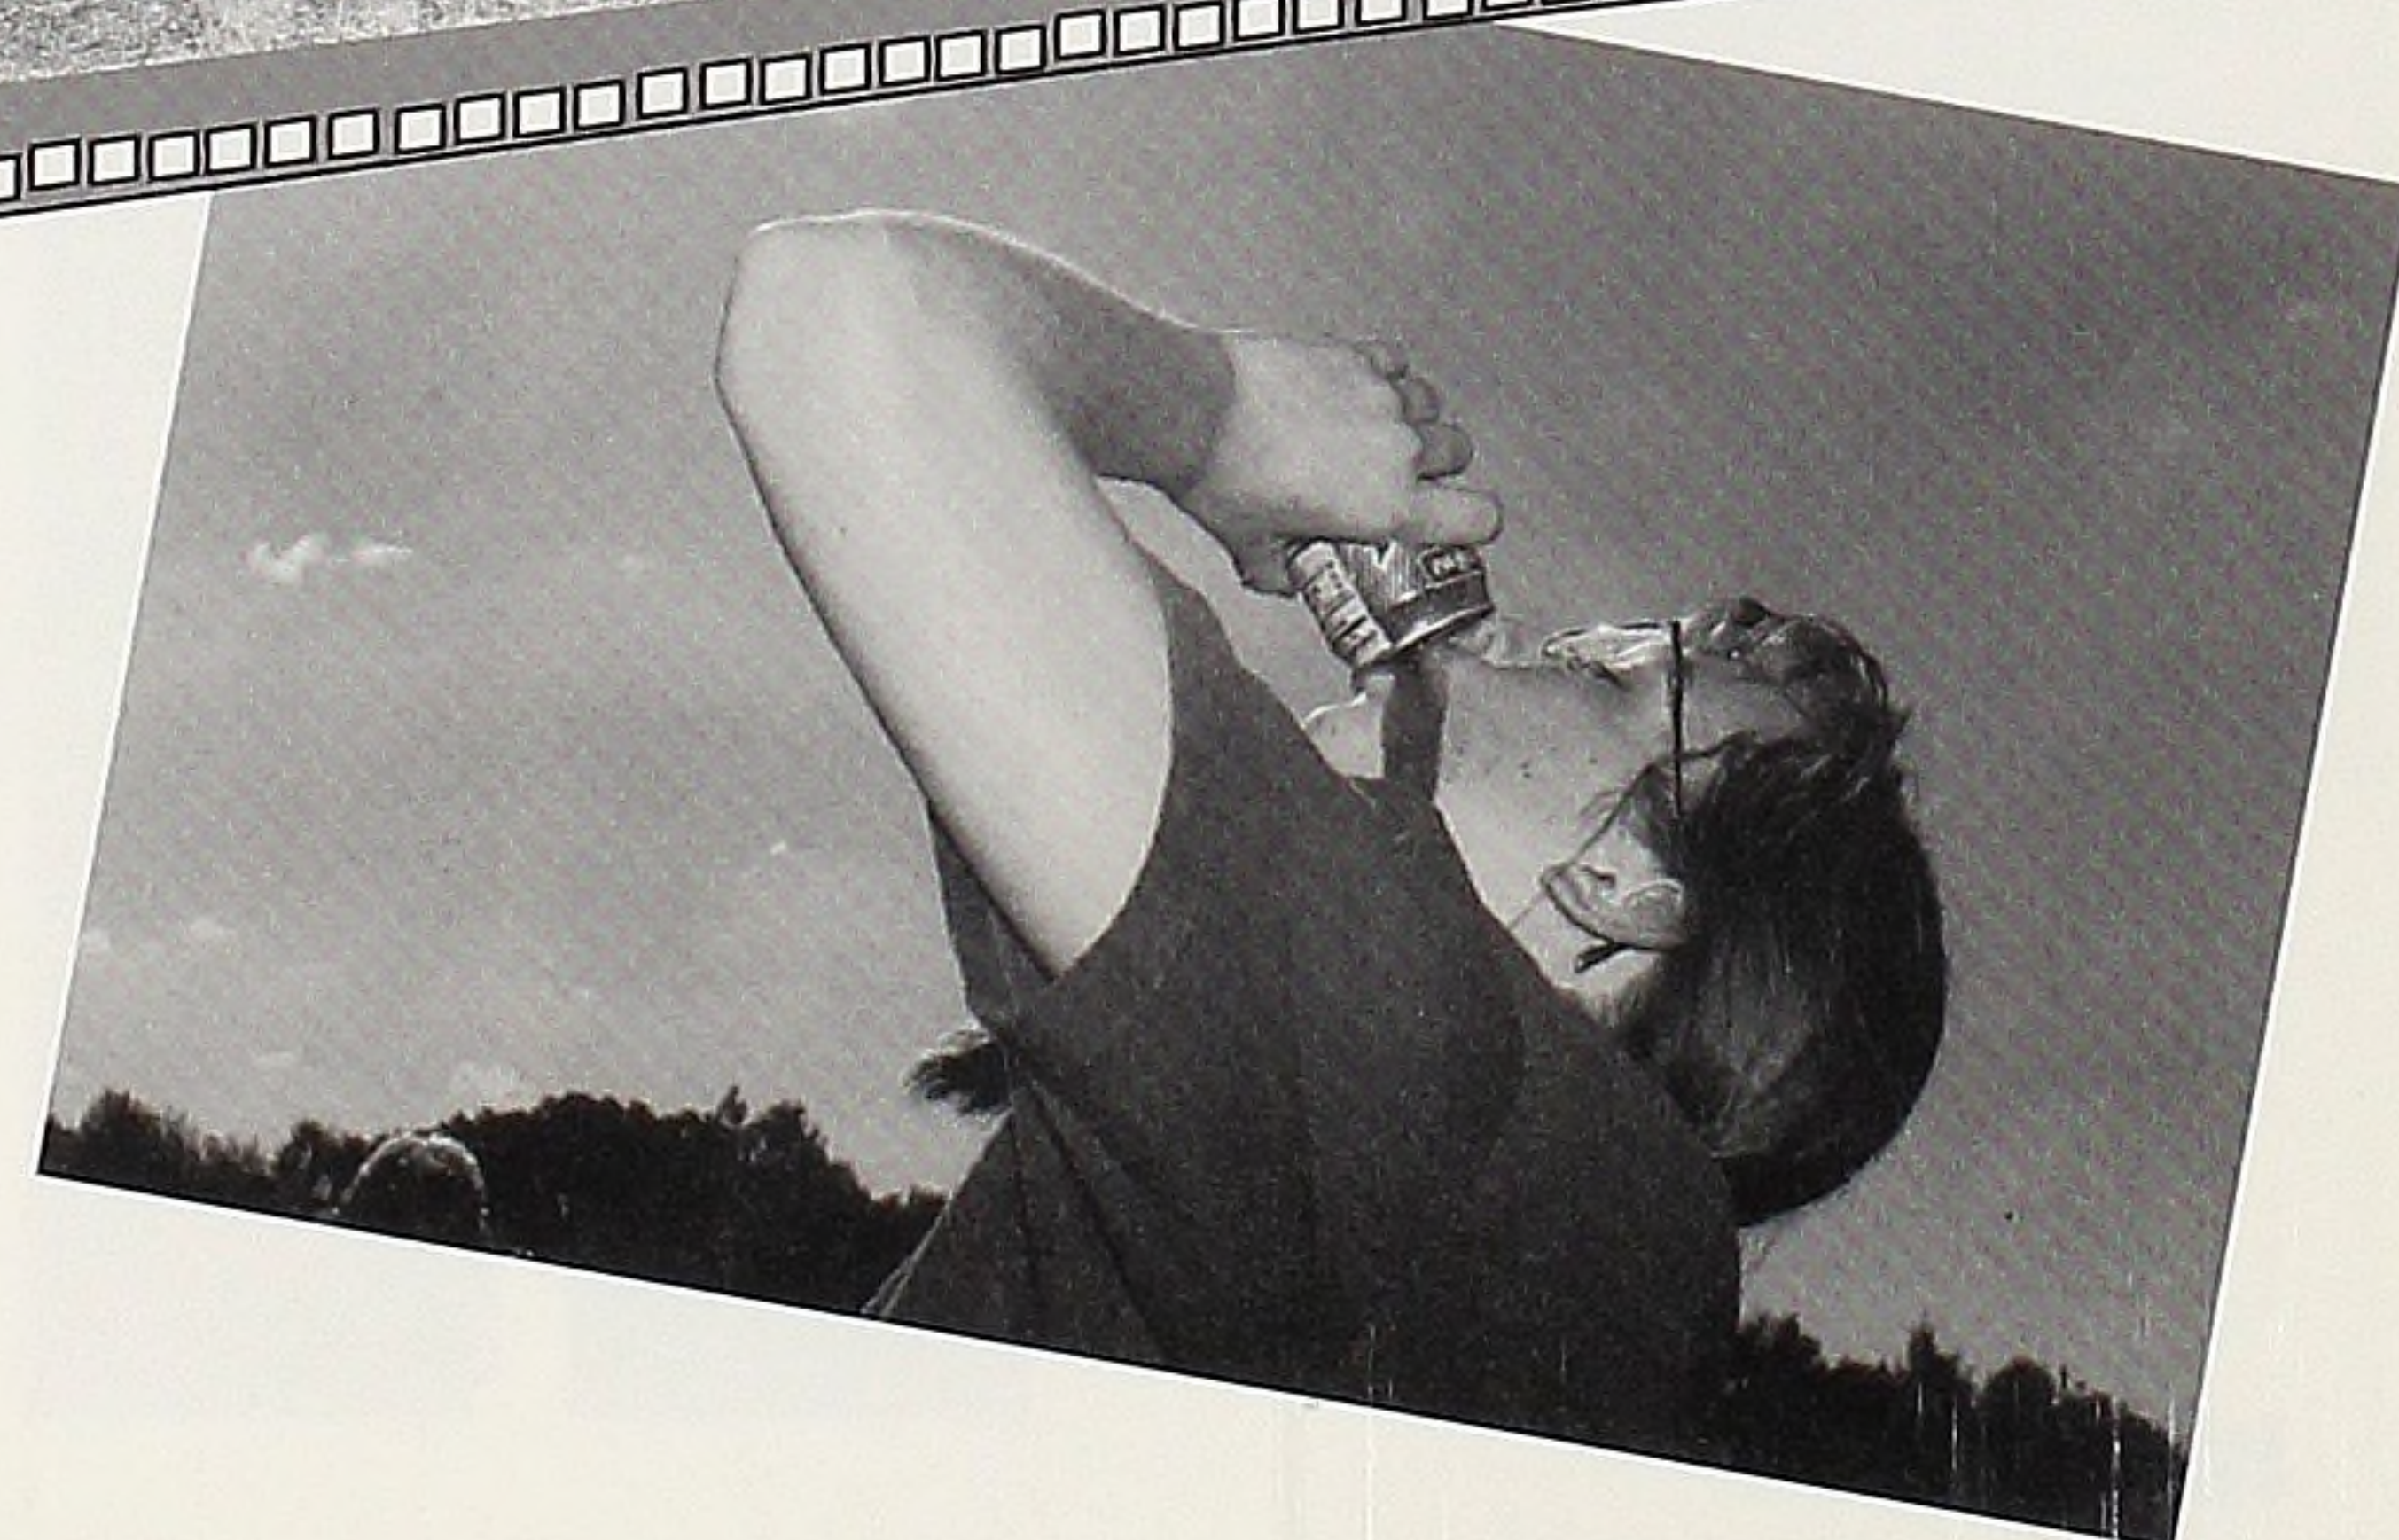

The events drew to a close declaring the DeltaBetacos team the winners of the afternoon's events.

Arbor Games was considered an overall success by the students who participated. Carmen Williams, Muffitt resident, said, "I thought it was a blast because you got to know people that you really didn't know [before] and we had a lot of fun. I really enjoyed it."

--by Shaun Gilroy

The relay races provided lots of fun and plenty of laughs during Arbor Games. Events included the bat spin, the wheelbarrow race, and the pop chug.

Why do you like Friends?

Tim Gale (Sr.) "Because it's hilarious. I love it. I like the cast, they are all good actors."

Heather Morgan (Fr.) "I think it's hilarious because it is so true to life. I like Chandler because he's so sarcastic."

Why do you dislike Married With Children?

Mike Ortell (Jr.) "I think it is garbage. It bashes family morals. It works against family unity. It's not a show Christians should watch."

Sarah Reicheld (Sr.) "It's morally wrong. I don't agree with the morals and values presented."

Spring Arbor College Press presents...

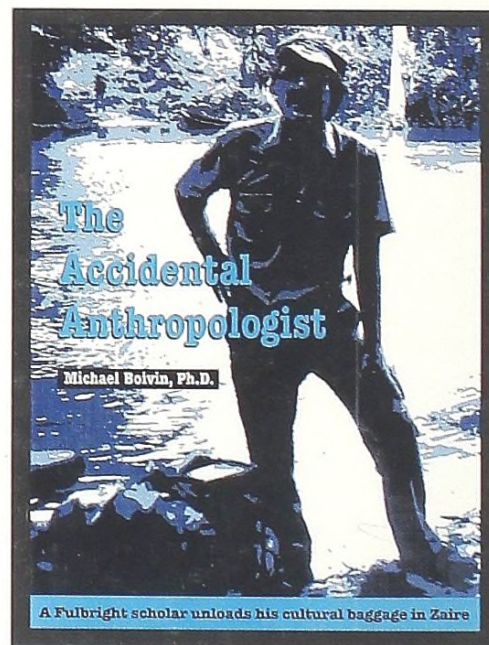

Parents on Parenting

What do you do if your daughter lives with your ex-husband—a thousand miles away? How can a father unload the emotional baggage he brings to the task of parenting? What happens when parents are from totally different cultures? Questions like these are addressed in Parents on Parenting, a collection of essays written by adults who earned college credit for thinking through what they learned about parenting by being parents. The result is fresh and thoughtful insights into the issues confronting today's changing families. Edited by Natalie Gianetti, dean of alternative education, and Dr. Barbara Cherem, professor of education. A discussion guide is available. ($12.00, ISBN 0-9634232-0-7)

The Accidental Anthropologist

When Dr. Michael Boivin went to Zaire to study the cognitive development of village children, this Fulbright scholar found that "the doctor and professor soon became the patient and learner." In a series of humorous and honest letters to his friends, collected here as The Accidental Anthropologist, he shares what he learned about another culture—and about his own. He encountered witchcraft and wisdom, duplicity and integrity, sorrow and joy. He worked with HIV-positive children, ate boiled caterpillars, and video taped a silverback gorilla. This highly readable account includes thought-provoking photos, an overview of Zaire written by Boivin's 13-year-old daughter, and a glossary of the relatively few scientific and foreign terms. ($12.95, ISBN 0-9634232-1-5)
